

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Writing Spot: Desperate times call for desperate measures

Learning Outcome

Understand detailed descriptions of real or imaginary events and experiences in present, past or future and in spoken or written texts.

Can Do Statements

- I can write a paragraph about social issues.
- I can express disapproval or refusal using if.
- I can write about having or getting something done.

Ask your partner:

- Would you want to assist refugees?
Why or Why not?
- How would you feel if you had to leave your country in search of a better life?

Let's Explore!

Displaced* people is a humanitarian* issue we cannot ignore.

* "Displaced" means being forced to leave the area where they live.

 A "humanitarian" issue is an issue affecting a large group of people.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

With the decimation of cities in Syria, refugees have been flooding into Europe in search of a new life. They had their lives torn apart and their livelihoods ripped away from them by political instability and foreign invasion. Knowing that millions of people were searching for assistance, European leaders quickly scrambled to create policies and got additional border patrol officials prepared to manage the desperate people. Some leaders believe that if the refugees will make the dangerous voyage, then they will have to face the possible consequences.

Others have stated that if the refugees won't use the correct way of applying for residency, they will have few options. When Germany publicly stated that they would overlook United Nations protocol so that Syrian migrants could apply for asylum despite their means of arrival, many expected a sea of people. Indeed, hopeful families fled their country ripped apart from social strife and political unrest.

Now, Germany is struggling to deal with the thousands of refugees crossing their borders. Towns and cities cannot easily accommodate all the refugees. Authorities have found it difficult to provide all the services and accommodation necessary to assist the refugees on such short notice. Some refugees got their paperwork organized and returned quickly. However, if thousands of exhausted migrants won't wait in weeks-long waiting lines, then the German government will have a major problem on their hands. Now, that winter is approaching, this logistical nightmare will become dire.

Let's Practice!

Some issues can be quite controversial.

Instructions: Organize the words to create the initial halves of sentences 1 to 4. Write the words in the given space. Match each half with its corresponding ending a - d. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. the dangerous / voyage, / if the refugees / will make / Some leaders / believe that
 2. stated that / applying for / way of / won't use / the correct / if the refugees / Others have / residency,
 3. waiting lines, / in weeks-long / exhausted migrants / won't wait / However, / if thousands of
 4. to cross / their borders, / disallow refugees / officials will / If government
- ____ a. then they will have to face the possible consequences.
 ____ b. they will have few options.
 ____ c. then the German government will have a major problem on their hands.
 ____ d. then the European Union will enter a period of instability.

Let's Practice!

What have countries and governments done in response to the crisis.

Instructions: Classify and write the options given into the correct category. Practice saying the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. Some governments had their borders secured before the migrants arrived.
2. They had their lives torn apart and their livelihoods ripped away from them by political instability and foreign invasion.
3. Now, that winter is approaching, this logistical nightmare will become dire.
4. With the decimation of cities in Syria, refugees have been flooding into Europe in search of a new life.
5. European leaders quickly scrambled to create policies and got additional border patrol officials prepared to manage the desperate people.
6. Some refugees got their paperwork organized and returned quickly.

Having or Getting Something Done (Causative Get and Have)

Other

Extension Activity

Let's write about social issues close to your heart.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Go online and research a particular social issue.
- Write a 120-150 word diary entry about an important social issue facing society.
- Include answers to Wh- questions.
- How do people feel about the issue? Discuss a variety of viewpoints.
- What is your response to the issue? Do you have any suggestions on how to improve the current situation? Include a date and greeting.
- Read your diary entry to a partner.

Self-Assessment

Yes
No

I research a particular social issue facing society.

☐ ☐

I write a diary entry about my ideas and feelings on the issue.

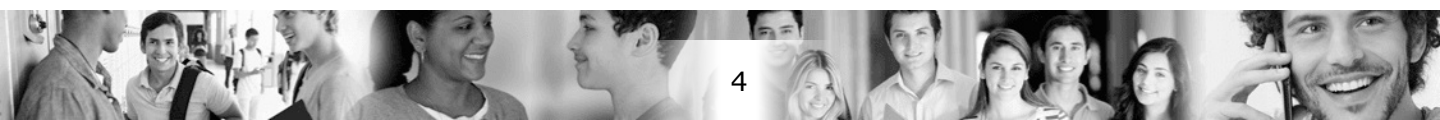

☐ ☐

I read my diary entry about social issues to a partner.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- decimation (noun): to severely damage or destroy people or an area
e.g. With the decimation of cities in Syria, refugees have been flooding into Europe in search of a new life.
- migrant (noun): a person who goes from one place to another especially to find work e.g. These migrants are looking for a better future.
- voyage (noun): a long journey to a distant or unknown place especially over water e.g. Some leaders believe that if the refugees will make the dangerous voyage, then they will have to face the possible consequences.
- to scramble (verb): to move or act quickly
e.g. European leaders quickly scrambled to create policies and got additional border patrol officials organized to manage the desperate people.
- dire (adjective): very serious or extreme e.g. There was going to be dire consequences.
- logistical (adjective): the things that must be done to plan and organize a complicated activity or event that involves many people e.g. Now that winter is approaching, this logistical nightmare will become more dire.
- authorities (noun): people who have power to make decisions and enforce rules and laws
e.g. Authorities do not have the time to provide registration, funds, and secure accommodation.
- residency (noun): legal permission to live in a place
e.g. Other have stated that if the refugees won't use the correct way of applying for residency, they will have few options.
- exhausted (adjective): to use all of someone's mental or physical energy: to tire out or wear out someone completely e.g. If thousands of exhausted migrants won't wait in weeks-long waiting lines, then the German government will have a major problem on their hands.
- strife (noun): conflict, disagreement, dispute
e.g. Indeed, hopeful families fled their country ripped apart from social strife and political unrest.
- asylum (noun): protection given by a government to someone who has left another country in order to escape being harmed
e.g. Germany publicly stated that they would overlook United Nations protocol, so that Syrian migrants could apply for asylum despite their means of arrival.

Learning Points

Will/Won't in the If-Clause

You usually use will/won't with a conditional clause when you want to talk about possibility in the present or future. There are some exceptions to this rule:

1. If you will ... = if you insist on ...

When you use will it means the same as the verb insist on. When you say this kind of structure, you place a lot of word stress on will:

If you will run twenty kilometers a day, it's not surprising your feet hurt. =

If you insist on running so much, it's not surprising you have sore feet.

2. If you won't ... = if you refuse to ...

Won't (will not) means that you refuse to do something. When you use won't in a sentence it is usually stressed.

If he won't come camping with the group, we will get him to come one way or another.

If he refuses to come camping with the group, there's nothing we can do to make him.

Examples:

- Some leaders believe that if the refugees will make the dangerous voyage, then they will have to face the possible consequences.
- If government officials will disallow refugees to cross their borders then the European Union will enter a period of instability.
- Other have stated that if the refugees won't use the correct way of applying for residency, they will have few options.
- However, if thousands of exhausted migrants won't wait in weeks-long waiting lines, then the German government will have a major problem on their hands.

Learning Points

Causative Get and Have

You use a causative verb when you want to talk about an action that was done by another person for you or someone. This means that the subject of the sentence was what caused the action to occur, but they didn't do it themselves.

You use the causative verbs get/have when you want to make it clear that it was the subject that paid, asked, or persuaded the other person to do the action.

For example:

Have your kids clean up their room.

In this sentence you ask or persuade your kids to clean their room.

The structure of the causative is:

have + object + verb

Have someone remind everyone.

or

Subject + get + object + Infinitive

I got Sandra to remind everyone.

Examples:

- Some refugees got their paperwork organized and returned quickly.
- Some governments had their borders secured before the migrants arrived.
- European leaders quickly scrambled to create policies and got additional border patrol officials organized to manage the desperate people.

