Let's Start!

Let's find out how we can help out!

Learning Outcome

Describe necessity, duty, advice, or strong disapproval in written and spoken situations according to work and social contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about social issues and moral dilemmas.
- I can talk about having something done.
- I can express what is necessary.

Ask your partner:

- If you could run your own charity, what social issue would you focus on?
- What do you think are the biggest social challenges facing your country?

Let's Explore!

Amy gets involved.

* To "get involved" means to participate.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Candice: It's so great to meet you in person, Amy. Vanessa speaks very highly of you.

Amy: Thanks, she is a great student and friend.

Candice: So, I understand you're interested in potentially getting involved?

Amy: Exactly, I've been very fortunate in my life, and I feel like I absolutely must give something back.

Candice: Great. Let me tell you a little bit about what we do. We are committed to ending the AIDS pandemic in Lesotho and doing all we can for the 200,000 orphans who live there.

Amy: My god, it sounds awful.

Candice: It is. And we must do something about it. To start, we had a local company recruit a project manager. His name is Samuel, and he is from Maseru, the capital.

Amy: It's great that you're making use of local expertise. A lot of non-governmental organizations failed to do this in the past.

Candice: Exactly, we really had to rethink things. Newton has been such a huge help. He had experts brought in to spearhead education initiatives. Then, he had a few foster homes built.

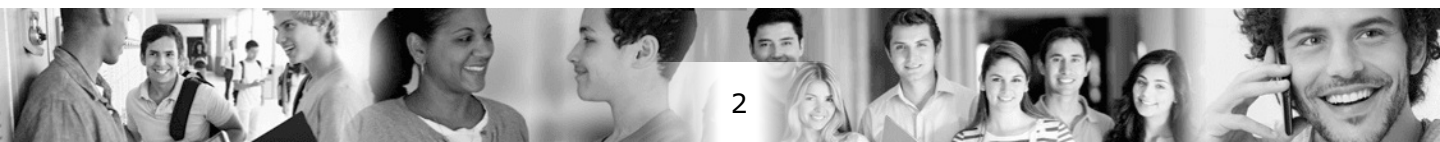

Amy: This all sounds so ambitious. I'm really not sure if I am suited for it. How would I fit in?

Candice: Well, you have to get some first-hand experience, to see if you're up to the challenge.

Amy: I don't think I'm ready to ship out to Africa just yet.

Candice: That's not what I mean. You don't have to go abroad to get experience. Why don't you try something local? I know a guy who runs a local soup kitchen. I'll have him give you some volunteer work this Sunday. If you make it through that, we'll set you up with some projects here.

Amy: Sounds great!

Let's Practice!

Amy wants to volunteer!

Instructions: Underline all the modal verbs that express necessity. Practice the conversation with your partner. Switch roles. Correct each other's pronunciation.

Amy: I want to volunteer because I've been very fortunate in my life, and I feel like I absolutely must give something back.

Candice: Perfect, we want to help 200,000 orphans who are barely getting enough food and we must do something about it. We should be getting new volunteers this week, which makes me feel grateful. We are also getting a manager who has worked with the orphans before because we had to get some first-hand experience

Amy: That sounds good. Just to clear things up, I might not be ready to travel abroad, but I'm definitely in to help you as much as I can from here.

Candice That's not a problem. You don't have to go abroad to get experience. You could do something local like helping us re-collect food.

Amy: Sounds perfect! I must tell my friends about this.

Let's Practice!

Candice tells Amy about the volunteer program.

Instructions: Organize the mystery sentence. Write each sentence in the correct order below. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. manager / project / company / a / had / recruit / . / a / We / local

2. had / in / Newton / initiatives / brought / spearhead / to / . / education / experts

3. had / homes / . / foster / a / he / Then / few / built

4. have / some / Sunday / I'll / volunteer / you / work / . / him / this / give

5. the / help / with / had / new / coming / . / project / We / to / volunteers

Extension Activity

The most important social issues of our time.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Make point form notes on the most important social issues facing your country.
- Using "must" and "have to", expand your notes into ten complete sentences (e.g. We have to increase employment.)
- Compare your list with a partner. Discuss the pros and cons of each list.
- Combine your list with your partners to make a new top ten list.

Learning Points

Causative Verb: Have

You use the causative verb to have to refer to a situation when someone does, did, or will do something for another person.

There are two structures you can use with the causative verb to have:

1. To have something done

To have + object + past participle

For example:

He had a few foster homes built.

1. To have someone do something

To have + person + verb

For example:

I'll have him give you some volunteer work this Sunday.

Examples:

- He had experts brought in to spearhead education initiatives.
- We had a local company recruit a project manager.

Learning Points

Expressing Necessity: Must/Have to/Have got to

You use the modal verbs and phrases must, have to and have got to to express necessity in the past and present.

You can use must to talk about obligations. These expressions of obligation may be directed at the speaker (to talk about personal goals) or the listener (to talk about obligations):

I really must try to get more exercise. (directed at the yourself (the speaker))

You must come to work on time. (directed at the listener)

There is no past tense form of must. To talk about obligation in the past, you use had to:

When I was in school, I had to play a lot of sports.

You use have to to express obligations that come from outside of the speaker, for example, rules and regulations imposed by an authority:

I have to enter my hours on my timesheet every day.

Do you have to do any community service?

You use don't have to (not mustn't) to express an absence of obligation.

You use mustn't to express that some action is forbidden:

I don't have to go to the workshop. It's optional. (I can miss the workshop; I have a choice.)

You mustn't share these files. It's confidential information. (Don't share these files with anyone; you don't have a choice.)

Examples:

- I absolutely must give something back.
- You have to get some first-hand experience.
- You don't have to go abroad to get experience.
- We really had to rethink things.
